After explaining some passages concerning Hezekiah Dr. Talmage gave out the drive from you one of the greatest bless that in all personal controversies the one following hymn, which was sung by the hath the dying day! The cradle of clouds from which the sun rises is beautiful enough, but it is surpassed by the many colored mausoleum in which at evening it is buried. Sunset among the mountains! It almost takes one's breath away to recall the scene. The long shadows stretching over the plain make the glory of the departing light on the tiptop crags and struck aslant through the foliage the more transpicuous. Saffron and gold, purple and crimson commingled. All the castles of cloud in conflagration. Burning Moscows on the sky. Hanging gardens of roses at their deepest blush. Banners of vapor, red as if from carnage. in the battle of the elements. The hunter among the Adirondacks and the Swiss villager among the Alps know what is a sunset among the mountains. After a storm at sea the rolling grandeur into which the sun goes down to bathe at nightfall is something to make weird and splendid dreams out of for a lifetime. Alexander Smith in his peem compares the sunset to "the barren beach of hell." but this wonderful spectacle of nature makes me think of the burnished wall of father that after he was dead, he had his heaven. Paul in prison writing my text | father burned to ashes and then put the remembers some of the gorgeous sunsets among the mountains of Asia Minor, and how he had often seen the towers of Danascus blaze in the close of the Oriental lays, and he flashes out that memory in the text when he says: "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath.' Sublime and all suggestive duty for people then and people now. Forgiveness before sundown. He who never cels the throb of indignation is imbecile. He who can walk among the injustices of the world, inflicted among himself and others, without flush of cheek, or flash of eye, or agitation of nature is either in sympathy with wrong or semi-idiotic. When Ananias, the high priest, ordered the constables of the court room to smite Paul in the mouth, Paul fired up and said : "God shall smite thee, thou whited wall." In the sentence immediately before my text Paul commands the Ephesians : "Be ye angry and sin not." It all depends on what you are mad at and how ong the feeling lasts whether anger is right or wrong. Life is full of exasperations. Saul after David, Succoth after Pideon, Korah after Moses, the Pasquins Augustus, the Pharisees after Christ, and every one has had his pursucrs, and we are swindled, or belied, or misrepresented, or persecuted, or in some way wronged, and the danger is that healthful indignation shall become baleful spite, and that our feelings settle town into a prolonged outpouring of temper displeasing to God and ruinous to surselves, and hence the important inunction of the text: "Let not the snn go down upon your wrath.'

Why that limitation to one's anger? Why that period of flaming vapor set to punctuate a flaming disposition? What has the sunset got to do with one's resentful emotions? Was it a haphazard entiment written by Paul without special significance? No, no; I think of five reasons why we should not let the sun set before our temper sets :

First: Because twelve hours is long nough to be cross about any wrong inflicted upon us. Nothing is so exhausting to physical health or mental faculty is a protracted indulgence of ill humor. It racks the nervous system. It hurts the digestion. It heats the blood in brain and heart until the whole body is first overheated and then depressed. Beside that, it sours the disposition, turns one aside from his legitimate work, expends energies that ought to be better employed, and does us more harm than it does our antagonist. Paul gives us a good, wide allowance of time for legitimate denunciation, from 6 o'clock to 6 o'clock, but says: "Stop there!" Watch the decending orb of day, and when it reaches the horizon take a reef in your disposiion. Unloose your collar and cool off. Change the subject to something delight-Unroll your tight fist and shake hands with some one. Bank up the fires at the curfew bell. Drive the growling dog of enmity back to its kennel. The hours of this morning will pass by, and the afternoon will arrive, and the sun will begin to set, and I beg you on its blazing hearth throw all your feuds, invectives and satires. Other things being equal, the man who preserves good temper will come out shead. An old essayist says that the celebrated John Henderson of Bristol, England, was at a dining party where political excitement run high and the debate got angry, and while Henderson was speaking, his opponent, unable to answer his argument, dashed a glass of wine in his face, when the speaker deliberately wiped the liquid from his face and said: This, sir, is a digression; now, if you please, for the main argument." worldly philosophy could help but very few to such equipoise of spirit, the grace of God could help any man to such a tri-umph. "Impossible," you say, "I would have either left the table in anger or have knocked the man down." But I have come to believe that nothing is impossi ble if God help, since what I saw at Beth-Shan faith cure in London, England, two nied divine forgiveness. summers ago. Why not step at pacification, if it is ever fence out your enemies by the golden bars of the sunset? Why not stand behind the barricade of evening cloud and | but Aristippus, who was least to blame say to them, "Thus far and no farther?" Many a man and many a woman is hav ing the health of body as well as the health of soul eaten away by a malevo lent spirit. I have in time of religious awakening had persons, night after night, began the quarrel, but thou hast been come into the inquiry room and get no peace of soul. After awhile I have bluntly asked her: "Is there not some one against whom you have a hatred that you are not willing to give up? After a little confusion she has slightly whispered "Yes." Then I said to her: "You will never find peace with God as long as you retain that virulence."

A boy in Sparta having stole a fox kept him under his coat, and though the fox was gnawing his vitals, he submitted to it rather than expose his misdeed. Many a man with a smiling face has under his jacket an animosity that is gnawing away the strength of his body and the integrity of his soul. . Better get rid of that hidden fox as soon as possible There are hundreds of domestic circles where that which most is needed is the spirit of forgiveness. Brothers apart, and sisters apart, and parents and children apart. Solomon says a brother offended is harder to be won than a strong city. Are there not enough sacred memories of your childhood to bring you together! The rabbins recount how that Nebuchadnezzar's son had such a spite against hi ashes in four sacks and tied them to four eagles' necks which flew away in opposite directions. And there are not domestic antipathies that seem forever to have scattered all parental memories to the four winds of heaven. How far the eagles fly with that sacred ashes! "Look out, that curtain will surely A gas jet was burning in close proximity to a lace curtain in the rear end of a down town lace importing store. "I'm not worried about it," replied the merchant to a reporter who had called his attention to the circums "You are not the first man that light has "Why don't you turn the light out, then, or move the curtain?" "Because there is really no danger." "You are taking great chances. "You wouldn't think so if you knew what that curtain is made of. It is a new French invention that has been put on the American market recently and I am the agent. The lace is dipped in a solution which makes it incombustib termine whether dyed goods can be so treated. At present only white woolen who told her to call him Willipus and cotton fabrics can be treated in that Wallapus. The name tickled her way."

ut scientific men call it apteryx, which is a Greek word meaning wingless, be cause, though a bird, it has no wings. It not only has no wings, but it has no tail -not even so much as an apology for ne. And, as if that were not enough, it has no feathers worthy of the name Its quills are covered with soft down for about one-third of their length, and then are fringed with hairlike webs out to the ends, which are sharply pointed. It is only as large as a common domestic fowl, but it has much stronger and stouter legs and bigger feet. When it sleeps in the daytime-for naturally it is odd enough to choose the wrong time for sleeping-it rests its long bill on the ground, and so makes itself look like a strange sort of three legged stool. Most other birds use their beaks or their wings or their spurs to fight with, but it would be foolish to expect any such natural proceeding from the kiwi; and, in fact, its plan of fighting is to kick. It is very fond of earth worms, and one of its ways of procuring them is worthy of so odd a bird. It thumps the earth with its big feet and if there are my worms in the vicinity, up they come discover what is the matter. It is a cousin to the ostrich, and though plumage has no such value for us as its large relative's has, it is very highly valued by the natives of New Zealand. The kiwi has a very tough skin, which when it is properly dressed, makes a good

First and Last. About a mile from Land's End I passed hrough the little village of Sennen, which oasts an inn with an extraordinar double name. On one side of the swing ing sign are the words, "The Last Inn i England," and on the other side, "Th First Inn in England." My driver, ob serving my interest in these announce ments, touched his hat and said: "There's two more Firsts and Lasts just ahead Sure enough, in five minutes we can up to another one of them, more gene ally known as the "Land's End Hotel, to distinguish it from No. 1. Here I de cided to stop, as the road beyond seemed too rough for a carriage. On the top of a cliff, which is the actual end of Cornvall, another but smaller building stood ut sharply against the sky. On the side facing me are painted words too small to be read in the distance. I borrowed telescope from a sailor who was studiously scanning the horizon, and then made out the inscription—"First and Last."—Cor New York Journal of Commerce.

Tardy Legislation. At last the game butchers of the great vest have stopped killing buffalo. The ouffalo are all dead! The time has now arrived for the territories to enact stringent laws against the killing of these anmals, and I am pleased to see that the Montana legislature has just rushed through a bill to that effect-only ten years behind its time! Next year, when the last buffalo of the eighty head still alive in the Panhandle of Texas is hunted down and killed, it will be time for the Lone Star state to frame a bill for his rotection; but its final passage can ardly be expected until 1897. While the territories are passing laws ainst the killing of buffalo, they ought so, by all means, to make the killing of mastodons between Aug. 15 and Dec. , punishable by a fine or imprisonment. They should also pass laws against the pping of mastodon carcasses out of their respective territorial limits.—The
